STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

River View should be placed on the register of ^{Ala. Historical Commission} significant sites in Alabama. It was in the vanguard of the New South movement that followed the devastation left at the end of the War Between the States.

Henry W. Grady eloquently deplored the fact that the South, rich in climate, soil, timber, minerals, water, and people had to go elsewhere to purchase the simplest merchandise.

With little capital, and no benevolent external aid, the founders of River View made a successful effort to move from a strictly agrarian economy to a more diversified one.

The enterprise used the river for transportation, power, and the humidity needed for textile production. It relied on surrounding farms for some of its raw materials and on an intelligent, energetic people needing employment.

This break-through created a need for other occupations and services. All this provided the ability to help support regional ventures into other types of industry.

Ala. Historical Commission

1. 1468 California Street; The River View Kindergarten
c. 1914; One large room; one story; pyramid roof; 12 over 1 bay windows on each side; frame construction with vinyl siding over original clapboard; full width portico; continuous brick foundation over stone piers; urban site.

This is now a private dwelling but for many years served as the River View Kindergarten, sponsored by West Point Manufacturing Company. Pre-school age children from the community attended here for two years and then enrolled in River View School at age six.

2. 1465 California Street; The First Christian Church of River View (Union Church)
c. 1870; Church building with basement; frame with siding; gabled roof; round top cathedral type stained glass windows; two front doors; steeple; cemetery adjacent to church; urban site.

The First Christian Church of River View was organized in 1897. The Union Church was first built for the use of the Methodist, Christian and Baptist congregations on alternate Sundays. The Baptist and Methodists later built churches of their own.

In 1901, a large part of the roof of the church was blown off and a new roof was built above the old one.

During 1938, the church went into a renovation program. The ceiling was cathedralized, one-half underneath the church was excavated, and Sunday School rooms were built. Celotex was put on the walls and ceiling. Oak flooring was added. Square windows in the sanctuary were replaced with round top cathedral type windows.

During 1956-57, there was another renovation. All church benches were refinished; the heating system was changed from steam to gas; stained glass windows replaced the old windows. The front part of the church was changed into a vestibule with two front doors. The other half of the downstairs was excavated and made into Sunday School rooms.

3. 1445 California Street; River View Beauty Shop and Historic Site of River View Theatre and River View Drug Store
c. 1917; One story frame building; gable side and front roof; nine over nine windows; continuous brick foundation; urban site; front and side entrances with awnings.

This building was moved from the Fairfax Community in 1977. The historical significance of this building is, while in Fairfax, it was the telephone exchange for that community. It is now located on a historic site of the River View community.

This was the former location of the River View Theatre and the River View Drug Store. The original theatre on this spot was destroyed by fire on March 7, 1939 and was replaced by a new brick theatre and store. The building, combined theatre and store, was later torn down. Both contributed to the social and economic growth of the community.

4. California Street; Historic Site of M. M. Hunt General Mercantile Store

This was the site of a three story brick building that contributed to the economic history of River View. The third story of this building was a large hall used as a meeting place for the Masonic Lodge and the Eastern Star organizations.

The second floor for many years housed the general merchandise and grocery business for one of the pioneer men of the town, M. M. Hunt. He was also postmaster for many years, and part of the floor was partitioned off for post office business. Groceries were delivered out into town by mule and wagon.

The first floor had many various businesses over the years and included, at one time, the post office, telephone exchange, barber shop, cafe, constable office, and a Girl Scout meeting room.

5. 1425 California Street; United States Post Office and Historic site of River View Hotel
c. 1966; Brick Post Office; one story; flat roof; slight overhang at entrance; one over one windows on right side; three large windows at entrance; recessed site. The significance of this Post Office is that all residents of the community get their mail at a post office box, there is no door to door delivery out in the community.

This was the site of a two story wooden building used and operated as a hotel. Meals from the hotel were delivered to workers at the mill. The building was destroyed by fire on December 25, 1941.

6. 1415 California Street
c. 1902; Six-room mill cottage; six over six windows; vinyl siding over clapboard; continuous brick foundation over original piers; gabled roof; one-story; side porch; urban site.

14. 1331 California Street
c. 1902; Four-room mill cottage; one story; six over six windows; gable roof; front porch screened later; continuous brick foundation over original piers; frame construction; urban site; remodeled in 1919.
15. 1311 California Street; River View Baptist Church
c. 1922; Three and one-half story frame and brick building; L-shaped; central pedimented porch with two Dorie columns; original structure had two stories with gabled roof; one large room used as sanctuary with two classrooms on each side of first floor; two front entrances later changed to one; original clapboard now covered with vinyl siding; original slate roof; urban site. Educational building added at a later date, is brick with 12 pane windows; three floors used as classrooms. Old and additional structure has ground level accessibility on all floors; continuous brick foundation; steeple over front entrance.

The Baptist congregation met in the Union Church (#2) in early years and moved from there to another location about one-half mile from this present location.

16. 1281 California Street; Leak House
c. 1905; One story; four-rooms; frame with original clapboard; hipped roof; interior rock chimney; wrap-around porch with rock pillars; rock foundation with piers; urban site.

This was the home of D. S. Leak, Sr., prominent family of River View history. Before the streets were paved, Mr. Leak, as an employee of West Point Manufacturing Company, hauled dirt to be put on the streets. He also delivered coal and ice, in season, to the homes of the local people in the mill village.
17. 1275 California Street
c. 1913; Four rooms; two over two windows; pyramid roof; front porch with wrought iron railing; addition at left back; continuous block foundation; urban site.

24. 1225 California Street; The Weaver House
c. 1900; Four room rock house; full length front porch with wooden columns on brick piers; gable roof, six over six windows; urban site.

This was the home of a prominent River View family, James and Lizzie Weaver. One son, Tyre Weaver, Sr., ran the Johnson and Company store (#43), for many years. Tyre, Sr. was also involved in scouting over 60 years. The first Boy Scout troop organized in the Valley area was Troop 12 in River View. This troop was organized in 1915, and Mr. Weaver was the first Scoutmaster. The troop was sponsored by Riverdale Mill.

26. 1210 California Street; Collins House
c. 1900; One and one-half stories; gable roof; six over six windows with shutters; interior chimneys; vinyl siding over original clapboard; central pedimented porch with balcony and balanced wooden columns; continuous brick foundation; urban site.

This was originally the property of the Collins family along with many acres of land south of the house. After Buddy Milner and family lived in the house, it was purchased by West Point Manufacturing Company and remodeled for occupancy by T. J. Goggans, manager of Riverdale Mill. From that time, and until during the 1980s, the house was occupied by the Plant Manager of Riverdale Mill.

27. 1230 California Street
c. 1927; Seven rooms; one story; gabled roof; six over six windows; interior chimney; overhang at front entrance; urban site.

After extensive remodeling, this house was occupied for many years by the Assistant Manager of Riverdale Mill. It was sold to a private buyer during the 1980s.

28. 1244 California Street; River View Methodist Church Parsonage
c. 1940; Five room brick construction; one story; gable roof; continuous brick foundation; chimney on front near entrance; partial screened porch on side; six over six windows; urban site.

NOTE: The following houses, #127 thru #145 and #56 (already shown) are not 50-years old but should be listed as contributing because of the unique historic value to the town. The houses were built in 1946 and 1947, immediately at the end of World War II. Building material was simply not to be found, but two Riverdale Mill Management employees were very persistent in their efforts to secure the materials for the building of needed housing in the town. These two, Jack Swann and John Will Terry, were responsible for this effort. The government agreed to release the materials with one important stipulation attached.

The houses were to be rented to returning World War II service men who were in the employment of Riverdale Mill and West Point Manufacturing Company. Hence, the unique name, G. I. Street, was born.

Several players from this league later played in organized leagues as high as the major leagues. Data gives the league being organized in 1914, with River View being declared the first winner.

HISTORICAL SUMMARY

On hills dropping to the Chattahoochee River, the town of River View was born in 1866 and aptly named. The surrounding agricultural countryside was in economic ruin at the end of the War Between the States.

Two groups endeavored to build textile mills on the Alabama side of the river. "Both mills secured capital from the sale of high priced cotton in Savannah and Augusta [for markets in England] before it could be seized by Reconstruction agents."¹

Captain George Huguley was the driving force behind the Alabama-Georgia Mill at River View. Bricks for the building were made from clay; dug, shaped, and baked on the site. The original structure was 50 feet wide, 250 feet long, and four stories high. It had 48 looms, 3,000 spindles, and was run by water power. It was fully electrified in 1926.

Configuration of the hills, bends in the river, and two near islands result in a bit of land jutting eastward that is just below the high water mark of the river. By treaty, this makes it a part of Georgia, and the east end of the mill is on it.

Dan Cupid used this unique fact to facilitate a number of romances. Alabama law required a waiting period between granting licenses and speaking wedding vows. Georgia had no such restriction. Thus many couples secured licenses in nearby West Point and went with their minister to the far end of the mill to be united in holy matrimony. One couple is known to have come from the center of Randolph County, some 50 miles away.

This mill began actual operations some time before the other project a few miles up the river.² Employing from 75 to 100 people, it was at the site of a grist mill that had served the ante-bellum plantation area. Later, just beyond the east end of the plant, a small hydro-electric plant was built. It is today operated by Georgia Power Company. The influx of workers also brought merchants, artisans, and professionals to serve the community.

A remarkable feature is that the hilly terrain provides ground level entrance to all four floors of the mill. If one counts the original office (a separate building further up the hill) and the present modern offices, there are six such levels.

The mill closed briefly in the Panic of 1873. William Lang, of England, who had helped with the Langdale Mill became superintendent in 1880. Ten years later it closed because of financial difficulties. Under guidance of Mr. LaFayette Lanier, it was soon refinanced and incorporated as Galeton Cotton Mills in 1892. Shortly after this there was litigation over ownership. When this was settled, it was renamed Riverdale Mill and operated as a subsidiary of West Point Manufacturing Company, hereinafter called the Company. In 1921 Riverdale became a division of the Company and converted from duck to toweling. It has run continuously since. From this time the Laniers have given much of the leadership that has provided progress and many contributions toward making River View a good place to live.

Built long before the automobile, the mill houses are close to the street. Most, however, have large wooded back yards; some leading to small streams. Originally, most of these houses were on piers. One late November day in the forties, the temperature started plummeting about noon, and before midnight had dropped to an incredible zero. Almost everyone had burst water pipes. After this, walls were built from ground to floor between all piers.

Old timers tell of two communal water wells that served the village. River View was the first of the Valley mill towns to have telephones. The houses were sold to employees in 1950. Most are well maintained today. There has always been a goodly number of privately owned homes.

John Parnell, who is credited with starting the peach industry in the South, came to River View from Ireland about 1870. He built and lived in a house built of rough pine logs while getting his enterprise underway. His brother, Charles Stewart Parnell, a member of Parliament, and agitator for Irish Home Rule, came for a short visit in 1872. It was short because, being accustomed to metropolitan London, he found the primitive ways of early Alabama a bit difficult. Later John moved to a nice house in what is now nearby Fairfax.³

Transportation in the early days was by boat and barge on the river, and by wagons on mostly dirt roads. The Chattahoochee Valley Railroad Company was chartered in 1895. It began operating between West Point and River View the next year, serving Lanett, Shawmut, Langdale, and Fairfax along the way. In addition to hauling freight, the trains had a passenger car.

Churches have always been important in the little town. Originally there was a union church building where the different denominations worked out a schedule to fit their services. As they were able, the various sects erected their own sanctuaries, with generous help from the Company. Today there are three Baptist, two Christian, two Methodist, and one Pentacostal churches offering full services.

Because of proximity to larger communities, River View had a senior high school only three years in the mid-twenties. The Company did much for education. It not only financed a kindergarten, it built a fine new school in 1928 to serve grades one through nine. During the great depression of the thirties when many schools had short terms, the Company kept these schools open nine full months.

The River View Junior High School had a full athletic program; i.e., football, basketball, and baseball. A lunch room began serving the children in 1947. Every year the International House students from Jacksonville State University visited the school. Young people from some twelve to fifteen countries, along with their American classmates, presented a program at the local theatre building. They spent the night in homes throughout the community, enabling a small textile town the opportunity to show Southern hospitality to people from all over the world.

Grades were small enough that the eighth and ninth grades could be taken on one bus to Montgomery one year and Atlanta the next. They visited the Capitol and other sights in those cities. Other field trips were made.

The annual Kindergarten graduation program was a community highlight. Some of the little tykes could be counted on to alter or add to the script.

There was a library that held many classic and contemporary novels, an unabridged dictionary, encyclopedia, atlases and a few periodicals.

The Company realized the value of recreation, and provided resources for the fielding of baseball teams and men's and women's basketball and softball teams. There was a beautiful nine-hole golf course lying between the hills and the river. A fine gymnasium was built in 1935. It provided a court for basketball and volley ball, plus a large club room (with kitchen) for community activities. There were also tennis and croquet courts. Fishing and hunting have always been popular. In the early days, they supplemented the family diet.

Although the smallest of the six Valley towns, River View was always competitive with them and surrounding cities. One year, in a playoff game for the baseball championship, River View acquired a nickname. The game was played on the home field and about the time the umpire yelled, "Play ball!" a rabbit ran across the infield. It's been Rabbit Town ever since.

The Company provided a theatre building where the Al Dun Amusement Company showed first run movies. That is, the same films that were showing in Birmingham and Atlanta. This splendid building was available for occasional use by the school and community.

The junior high school usually presented a play once a year, and the annual Christmas Tree party was held there.

This party, sponsored by the Company, was truly a joyous occasion. The teachers had taken a count of every child from River View, Alabama - 10/91 kindergarten through the ninth grade, plus any little ones at home. There was an appropriate program, and every child received a small present and a bag of fruit. Distribution was by some local citizen playing Santa Claus. The older children had much fun trying to guess his identity. The sponsors went to some length in choosing and changing participants to keep the game interesting.

Scouting for boys and girls was strong. Mr. Tyre Weaver, Sr. organized Boy Scout Troop 12 in 1915; many claim it the first in the Valley.

In 1980, River View, Fairfax, Langdale, and Shawmut were incorporated as Valley, Alabama. The community always has heartily supported Valley Haven School (for the retarded) and Valley High School in Fairfax; Lanier Memorial Hospital in Langdale; the Chambers County Library in Shawmut; and the Community Chest.

A resident of River View, who moved there fifty years ago, tells of things outsiders told him when he first went there. Everywhere he went people said, "If they ever start anything, they won't quit until it's finished. In games, no matter what the score, they won't concede defeat until the last man is out or the last second run off the clock." In West Point, Georgia, which (except for basic groceries, gas and oil) was "town" for the area, the merchants told him: "We never worry about accounts in River View - they'll pay you."

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

VALLEY MILL VILLAGES RECEIVE ALABAMA REGISTER LISTING

The Alabama Historical Commission recently announced that the mill villages of Shawmut, Fairfax, and River View have been added to the Alabama Register of Landmarks and Heritage and the recently designated Langdale Mill Village Historic District has been expanded.

The Shawmut Mill Village is a rather unique planned mill community. Streets radiate from a large, circular public park located in front of the Shawmut Mill, which was one of the first all-electric manufacturing plants in the South. Facing this communal area was the school, two churches, an auditorium, a post office, and a commercial building.

Virtually all of the homes that are located along Shawmut's tree-lined streets were constructed around 1908. The plans of these modest dwellings varied a bit, but most were one-story with a front porch and a steeply pitched pyramidal or hipped roof.

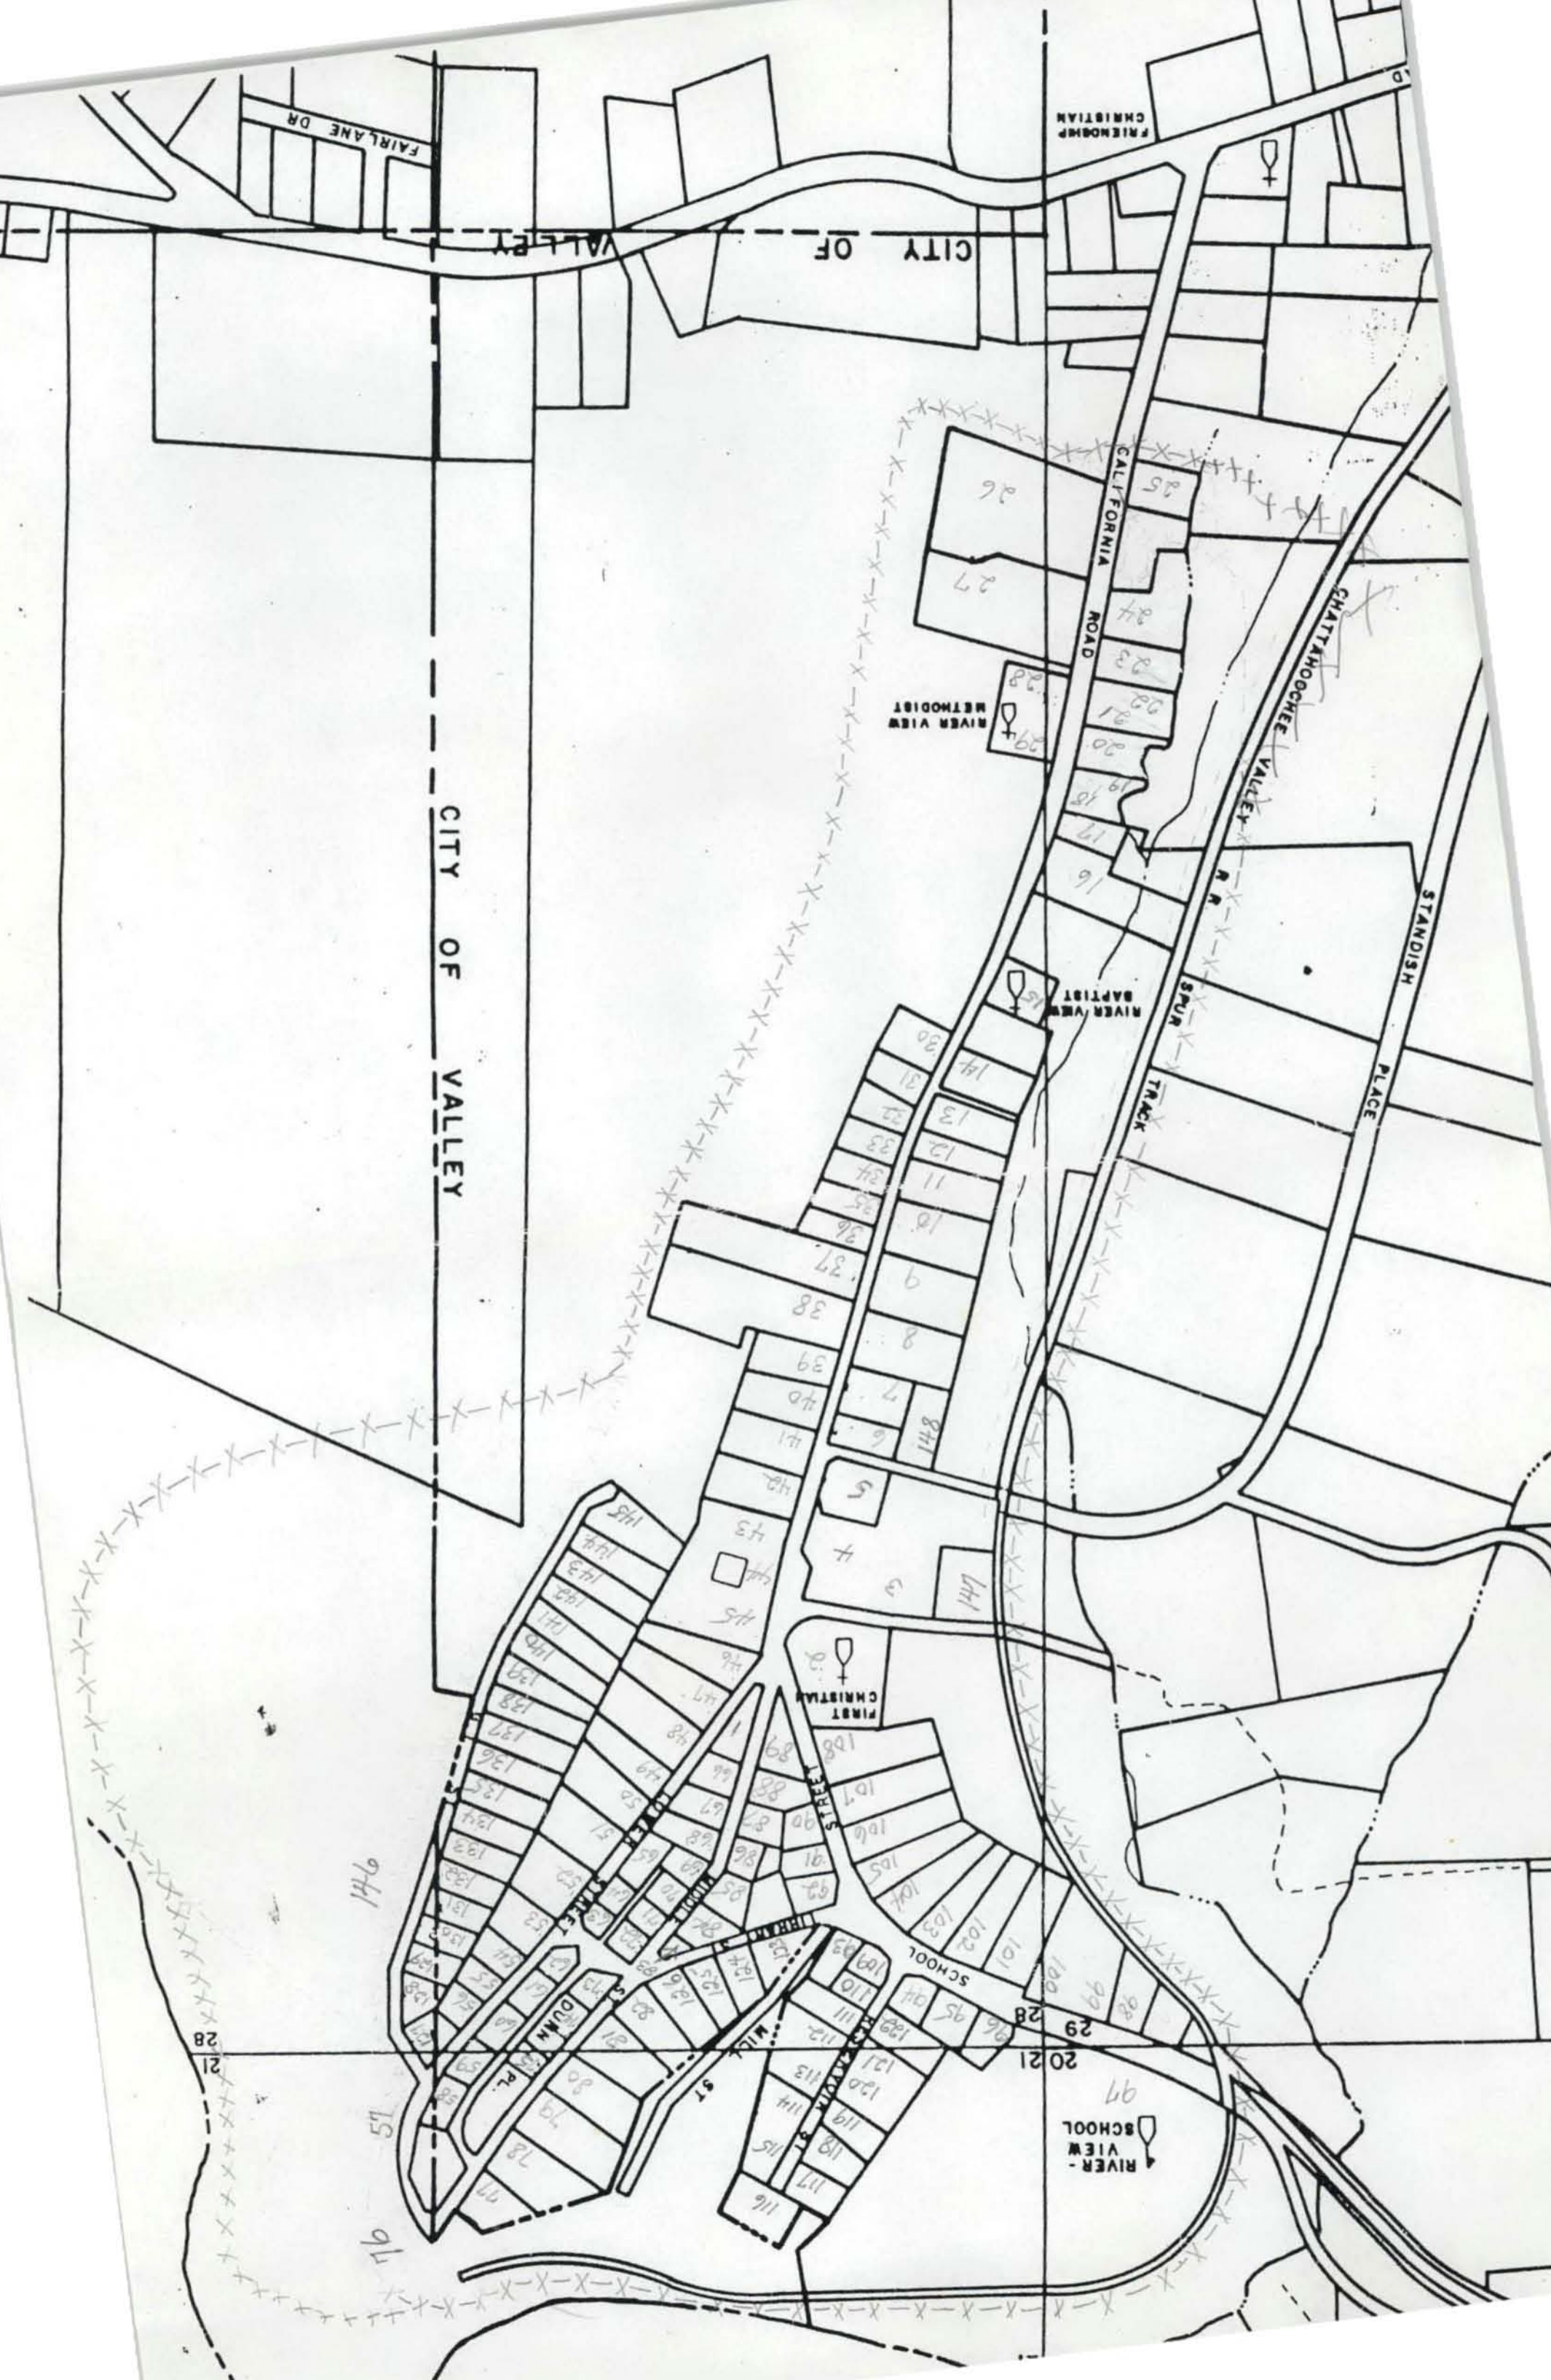

The Shawmut Mill Village Historic District includes 78 of approximately 350 buildings in the planned mill village.

The Fairfax Mill Village Historic District contains 104 of the approximately 300 buildings and structures that are associated with its development. Constructed between 1915 and 1917, the village is laid out around the Fairfax Mill although it does not follow a formal plan like Shawmut. The school, churches, an auditorium, park, and commercial buildings were all erected to face the mill.

The mill housing included numerous stock plan bungalows including some with clipped gables, L-plan dwellings, simple three-room cottages, as well as raised cottages and many other types of housing.

River View, founded in 1866, is the smallest of the mill village communities. The Alabama-Georgia Mill at River View began operation before the other mills located a few miles up the river. Located on the site of an
