

PLACES IN PERIL

The mission of the Alabama Historical Commission (AHC) is to protect, preserve, and interpret Alabama's Historic Places. The Commission works to accomplish this mission through preservation and promotion of state-owned historic sites as public attractions, and statewide programs to assist people, groups, towns, and cities with local preservation efforts and activities. For more information about the AHC's programs, please visit www.ahc.alabama.gov.

The Alabama Historical Commission created the Places in Peril program to identify and preserve historic sites by calling public attention to a select number of Alabama's threatened historic and archaeological sites. The list raises awareness by highlighting their plight through statewide publicity, thus striving to become a catalyst for preservation.

The AHC is proud to continue its relationship with Alabama Heritage to publish Alabama's Places in Peril listing. Places in Peril is a listing of some of the state's most endangered historic properties and focuses on bringing state and regional attention to these places to create meaningful solutions to the threat faced by historic buildings across Alabama. The AHC's partnership with Alabama Heritage will strengthen these efforts by reaching a key constituency.

The nomination cycle is May 1 – October 31. Applicants must use this link to complete the online nomination form. Announcement of the list will be made in late winter and the selected sites will be featured in the 2026 Spring issue of Alabama Heritage Magazine.

Contact AHC staff for more information

Paige Thomas
334-230-2643

Paige.Thomas@ahc.alabama.gov